In an effort to protect the health of horses cared for by our clinic and that of the horses with which they associate, Fairfield Equine Associates has the following requirements for horses coming to our hospital for elective or outpatient procedures:

1. There is no evidence of a contagious disease where the horse is regularly stabled.
2. A temperature log for the 72 hours (3 days) immediately prior to the appointment must be presented with the horse on admittance. The temperature must be recorded every 12 hours. If the horse has had a temperature greater than 101 degrees Fahrenheit or an increase in temperature of greater than 2 degrees at any time during this 72 hour time period, please call us for further instructions. (*)
3. The horse must have received a rhinopneumonitis vaccine between 7 and 90 days prior to the appointment.
4. A negative Coggins form dated within 1 year must be provided.
5. When appropriate, clients must bring their own tack so that horses may be evaluated with a rider. Fairfield Equine Associates will not provide tack to be used by multiple horses.

We believe these requirements are needed to ensure the safety of our patients and the access of our facility to the equine community. We greatly appreciate your efforts and compliance.

(*) Horses usually have a relatively stable rectal temperature. A horse's normal temperature is considered to be 100.5° F (38° C). For example, if a horse's temperature is normally 98.6° F it will stay very close to this temperature with a fluctuation of approximately 0.5° F in either direction. If your horse's temperature varies more than 2 degrees while monitoring it during the 72 hours prior to presentation please contact us.

This form must be completed and presented to the hospital personnel for inspection prior to the horse unloading, or it may be faxed the morning of the appointment.
